But we have ascertained that the Harvard men were allowed during their training plenty of meat, with milk, rice, vegetables, and fruit. Compared with the dietary of their opponents, it mainly differed in the matter of beer, which the Oxonians were allowed to consume, while the Americans used no beer. wine, or spirits. It is asserted that the Harward crew had been in training for four years. We cannot pretend to express any opinion as to what might have been the influence of the differences in the rowing and stearing of the two boats, or as to the effect of the want of experience of our river on the part of the Harvard men; but the differences of diet clearly had nothing to do with the result. The craws were well matched; the race was most severely contested, and it is evident that the Oxonians had to put forth their full powers to make the
